

Getting to Kew Gardens

Kew Gardens are situated next to the river Thames, 10 miles west of central London. Parking in the area is very limited and we encourage you to travel to Kew via public transport.

By London Underground

Kew Gardens Station (District Line — Richmond branch and London Overground) is the closest London Underground station, and is in zone 3.

If travelling from South Kensington tube station you need to take the District Line westbound towards Richmond. The journey time to Kew Gardens station is approximately 25 minutes. Upon arrival at the station it is a 15-20 minute walk from there to the Herbarium, Library, Art & Archives building where the Reading Room is located and the BHL Partners Open Meeting will be taking place on 13th April.

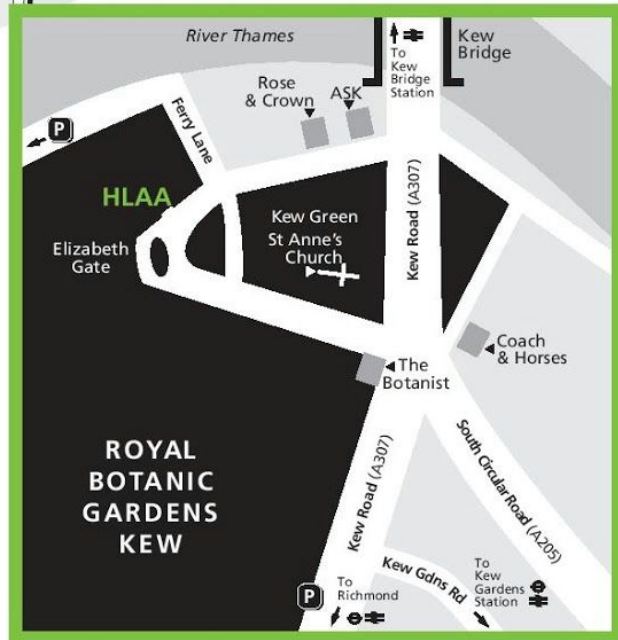

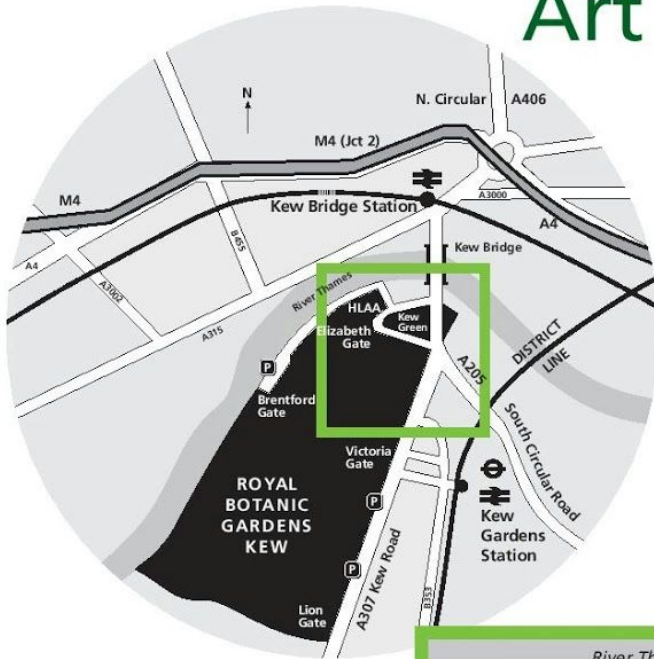

Upon arrival at Kew Gardens station:

- Exit left from the station gates, down the steps and through the underpass, up more steps and through the ticket office
- Walk past the parade of shops
- Walk along either Lichfield or Kew Gardens Road and then turn right into Kew Road (see map below)
- Turn left onto Kew Green. The Herbarium & Library building is in the far right corner close to the Elizabeth Gate to the Gardens.
